The new Ford Fiesta Holiday

Ford's new 'special value' Fiesta Holiday is just the job if you believe in making the most of life. Fun to drive, but very easy on the pocket, it's ideal for people who enjoy sun, sand and sea — or maybe a relaxing break spent savouring the magic of majestic mountains.

If coast and crags are far from home, long distances are cut down to size by the Fiesta Holiday's 1.1 OHV engine. Combined with Ford's five-speed gearbox — standard equipment, of course — the 50 PS at 5000 rpm power unit provides a remarkable blend of performance and economy†. Tested by Ford engineers, it hustled the Holiday from 0-60 mph in 14.2 seconds†† with a 90 mph maximum††.

Official fuel figures confirm the powertrain's all-round efficiency. They include no less than 58.9 mpg at a constant 56 mph†. On that basis, you could drive from London to the Scottish Highlands on a single fill of petrol, because the fuel tank — complete with a lockable cap — holds 8.8 gallons.

Electronic breakerless ignition is one of the engine's assets. This high-tech system provides spot-on timing while doing away with the need for regular adjustments. The feature is typical of a car designed in nit-picking detail to reduce day-to-day and long-term ownership costs.

Holidays are all about carefree travel beneath cloudless skies — so the Fiesta Holiday has tinted glass and a sunroof whose glass is screened to combat excessive heat and glare. The panel can be tilted, to enhance the Fiesta's excellent ventilation system, or removed completely to make the most of really good weather.

Mother Nature's less cheerful moods pose few problems, because the well-equipped Fiesta Holiday also has a rear foglight, a three-speed fan to boost the powerful heater's performance, and a wash/wipe for the tailgate's heated window. The heating element conserves energy by switching itself off automatically after about ten minutes.

Other features in Ford's 'special value' Holiday package include twin door mirrors, discreet but distinctive double pinstripes above the protective bodyside mouldings, grey fleece carpet in the spacious passenger compartment, door-mounted stowage bins and comfortable, cloth-trimmed front seats with height-adjustable head restraints.

Also standard are such things as reversing lights, fleece carpet for the boot, a quartz digital clock, a safety-conscious laminated windscreen and illuminated heater controls for that extra measure of after-dark convenience. Six warning lights supplement the accurate, easy-to-read instruments.

Like the rest of Ford's award-winning Fiesta family, the Holiday combines space for four or five people with a surprising amount of luggage room. Capacity is increased from 7.6 to 31.8 cubic feet† by simply folding the rear seatback.

That's good to know — even if you are one of those carefree characters whose holiday luggage rarely amounts to much more than a bikini and toothbrush.
